

The Baby Flower

*I'm afraid the baby flower is scared,
And it won't want to grow.
And since it's smaller than the other flowers,
It would rather hide among the grass in the field.
And it will be afraid of blooming then wilting
Cause it can't comprehend that all the seasons will pass someday.*

*I'm afraid the baby flower is too fragile
And the rain will tear away its petals.
And it won't understand that the water will make the soil soft
So it can soak up all the good nutrients.
And it'll be hard to learn that it can get stronger from the rain.
Even though for a time, the storm will be scary,*

*But I'll just have to trust the sun
To give her the light she needs
And encourage her to open up and show her color.
And I'll have to trust the wind
To not blow her away while she's growing
And to bring her to the right place when she's ready.*

*And I'll be sad when the flower isn't such a baby anymore.
But she'll be beautiful.
I know it.*

And I'll love her forever.
